LUMBER
PREMIUM DECKING

Brazilian Lumber

Specializes in importing the highest quality decking solutions with our tropical hardwoods and other outdoor construction materials. As direct importers, we stock a wide range of sizes and lengths of top-quality woods, including ipe, cumaru, garapa, and jatoba, as well as thermally-modified woods and ship nationwide.

We are a one-stop-shop for all things decking and siding, including both wood and composite materials. We have locations on both coasts in Los Angeles, California and Miami, Florida and have plans to continue expanding this upcoming year!

The best place to get Brazilian hardwood that I've found anywhere in California or online. The customer service is very good, the reps are attentive to you upon arrival and they are very knowledgeable. The quality of wood is superb and the pricing is cheaper than I can find anywhere else."

TRENDS GUIDE

In the ever-evolving world of outdoor landscaping, 2024 brings forth a host of exciting trends and innovations. Homeowners, contractors, architects, and designers alike are embracing innovative ways to bring greenery into urban and suburban environments. This guide explores our landscaping predictions of 2024, providing inspiration for your outdoor spaces.

Trend 1

Sustainable Landscaping

As awareness of environmental concerns grow year after year, homeowners are shifting away from the traditional green grass lawns once cherished, for environmentally-conscious alternatives like succulents and artificial turf.

Incorporating relaxing water features, such as pools, fountains, and outdoor showers, enhances the overall indoor outdoor living experience that we saw come out of the pandemic.

Designer Insights: Q&A Sessions

Expert Opinions on Landscaping Trends

In this section, we delve into conversations with renowned designers who share their perspectives on the latest landscaping and wood trends.

Ariel Asoulin South-Florida Based Designer

Q: What do you think are going to be the biggest wood trends in the next year or two?

A: I believe we're on the cusp of a shift in interior design trends. While the modern farmhouse style has been incredibly popular over the past couple of years, I foresee a move towards more modern and contemporary aesthetics. However, I anticipate that these contemporary designs will still incorporate natural wood elements as a key feature. Elements like slat paneling and wall cladding are likely to remain prominent, emphasizing a clean and minimalist look while maintaining a connection to the warmth and authenticity of wood. This balance between modernity and natural elements is something I find particularly exciting in the world of interior design.

Amy Belt South-California Based Designer

Q: What do you think are going to be the biggest wood trends in the next year or two?

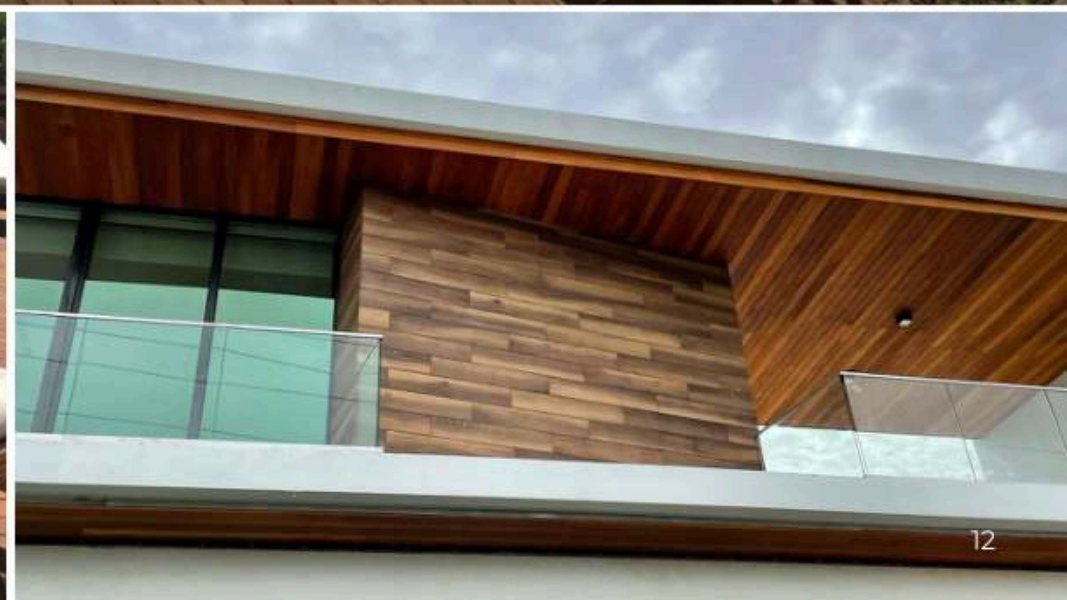

A: The biggest outdoor wood trends in the next year I think will be the following: Sustainable and Reclaimed Wood: The emphasis on sustainability is likely to continue, with a growing preference for sustainably sourced and reclaimed wood. Designers and consumers are increasingly conscious of the environmental impact of their choices, driving the demand for eco-friendly materials.

Dark Wood Finishes: Dark wood finishes, such as deep browns and black stains, have gained popularity for their luxurious and dramatic aesthetic. Expect to see these darker tones used in hardscape materials and outdoor furniture. Natural and Textured Finishes: Textured wood finishes that showcase the natural grain and knots of the wood are likely to be in demand. Matte finishes, wire-brushed textures, and other techniques that enhance the tactile quality of wood may gain popularity.

Geometric Patterns and Paneling: Geometric patterns in wood finishes and outdoor hardscape materials are expected to remain popular. Chevron and herringbone patterns, in particular, have been on-trend and are likely to continue to be used for a modern and stylish look.
